And you think you have it bad..

After the Wall Street crash of 1929, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped from 381 to 198 over the course of two months, optimism persisted for some time. The stock market rose in early 1930, with the Dow returning to 294 (pre-depression levels) in April 1930, before steadily declining for years, to a low of 41 in 1932.^[10] (1998/99 Prognosis Based Upon 1929 Market Autopsy".

Chick-fil-A is focused on perfecting the American drive-through experience. According to the Wall Street Journal, drones found that a busy Rockford, Ill., location could serve a customer every 13 seconds. Despite the shocking speed, the restaurant's operator, Philip Everett, believed he could reduce the serving time. "We hadn't understood half of what our different challenges were," Everett told the outlet. While studying images of his team, Everett was surprised by what he noticed. Everett realized one employee — who was overwhelmed with drive-through duties — and the Wi-Fi used in the parking lot needed to expand further out, as the technology limitations were slowing down orders. "Atlanta-based Chick-fil-A is on the vanguard of fast-food drive-through science, regularly dispatching specialist teams to its more than 3,000 restaurants to study the minutiae of parking-lot traffic patterns and how employees hand off orders," the article reads.

In a heist that left authorities scrambling, thieves made off with over 100,000 eggs — worth $40,000 — from Pete & Gerry's Organics in Pennsylvania. While investigators try to crack the case, the big question remains: Who steals that many eggs, and where do you even hide them?!
